GLOBAL

- Remittances to the Asia Pacific region from citizens working abroad could grow 6.7% in 2021 and 5.9% in 2022, after a 2% slump in 2020. It is underpinned by further easing of Covid-19 curbs in advanced economies. About 60% of the remittance inflows to the Asia-Pacific region would likely come from the United Kingdom, the United States, and the European Union, while nearly 30% would be from the Middle East.
- Japan's factory output soared 7.2% (MoM) in November as easing global supply chain bottlenecks helped car production leap out of its recent slump, lifting prospects for a strong fourth-quarter economic rebound. Cars and other motor vehicles and plastic products production in that month surged 43.1% and 9.5%, respectively. However, persistent global semiconductor shortages and new risks from the Omicron coronavirus variant are expected to cloud the outlook for the world's third-largest economy.

DOMESTIC

- Indonesia will likely ratify its membership of the Regional Comprehensive Economic Partnership (RCEP) early next year. A parliamentary commission overseeing trade rules had approved the ratification and its endorsement will be brought to a wider parliamentary vote in the first quarter of 2022. In 2040, the pact could boost Indonesia's trade surplus to USD979.3 million and it will also increase the country's GDP growth by 0.07 percentage points.

COMMODITIES

- The most-active copper contract in Shanghai fell 0.3% while prices in London Metal Exchange gained 0.8% (12/28). Copper prices were mixed as investors try to gauge the outlook for the Chinese economy amid slowing growth and the potential for stimulus next year. China’s economy expanded at a moderate pace in December on better business sentiment, although a slump in the property sector and weakening external demand continue to cloud the outlook.

STOCKS

- Japan's Nikkei dropped 0.58% while MSCI's broadest index of Asia-Pacific shares outside Japan fell 0.25%. Asian stocks slipped on Wednesday following a mixed Wall Street session as the region's investors positioned their portfolios for the new year and continued to grapple with increasing global numbers of Omicron coronavirus cases.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

- The U.S. dollar index, which measures the currency against six major rivals, jumped 0.177% to 96.223 (12/28). Safe-haven flows as worries over the spread of Covid-19 sapped a multi-day rally in equity markets, and on expectations that the Federal Reserve could raise interest rates as early as March helped the dollar on Tuesday.

YIELD

- 10-year government bond yields up to 6.38% on Thursday (12/30) from 6.34% on Friday (12/24) amid concerns about the discovery of cases of the Omicron variant of the corona virus from local transmission in Indonesia. The Ministry of Health (Kemenkes) reported that there was 1 additional case of local transmission, bringing the total positive for the Omicron variant to 47 cases. Looking at the development of the Omicron variant in Indonesia, foreign capital outflows from the Government Securities (SBN) market amounted to IDR2.01 trillion in the period 27-30 December 2021. Overall, from the beginning of the year until December 30, 2021 Bank Indonesia (BI) reported a total outflow of IDR80.92 trillion in the SBN market, while foreign capital entered IDR38.09 trillion in the stock market.
- On Thursday (12/30) the 10-year U.S. treasury yield up to 1.51% from 1.49% on Friday (12/24) amid the development of the Omicron variant in the United States (U.S.). Investors continue to monitor the development of the Omicron variant on economic growth in the U.S. Covid-19 cases in the U.S. have reached their highest level in recent days, according to data compiled by Johns Hopkins University. The national daily new cases are at a record seven-day average of more than 265,000 cases as of Tuesday (12/28).
